- Ignore what she's doing and hope that she picks up good sales ideas from others.
- Tell her that she needs to get going and things will eventually work out.

You told your new sales associate to go out and make some money. You see she's just not getting it. What do you do?

Kinetic Energy
The kinetic energy of an object is the energy which it possesses due to its motion. It is defined as the work needed to accelerate a body of a given mass from rest to its stated velocity. Having gained this energy during its acceleration, the body thereafter maintains its velocity unless it loses the same amount of energy to friction, drag, or another opposing force exerted on it.

Potential Energy
Potential energy exists when a force acts upon an object that tends to restore it to a lower energy configuration. This force is often called a restoring force. For example, when a spring is stretched to the left, it exerts a force that tends to restore it to a lower energy configuration. This force is often called a restoring force. For example, when a spring is stretched to the left, it exerts a force that tends to restore it to a lower energy configuration.

Conservation of Energy:
The nineteenth century law of conservation of energy is a law of physics that states that the total amount of energy in an isolated system remains constant over time. The total energy is said to be conserved over time.

Challenge:
A stone of mass 100 g is thrown upwards with an initial velocity of 20 m/s. What is its kinetic energy when its speed reduces to half its initial value? And at what height the stone attains this kinetic energy?
